AXBRIDGE
Brushed Bronze

Everything Booth & Co makes was inspired by something useful that turned out to be beautiful. Brushed bronze started out the other way round: a finish to be looked at has now been put to work.

CROSS
Brushed Bronze

The crosshead works. Bronze prefers life at ease. The Axbridge Cross in brushed bronze is a romance of both. Ceramic indices, in crackled white or classic black, carry Booth & Co's hallmark, and stamped hot and cold lettering. A tap, finished like something meant for a plinth.

Brushed Nickel

Brushed nickel catches the light and holds it carefully. It's neither silver nor gold, but a comfortable in between. It's a colour with a pearlescent sheen and a legacy, creating a new heritage of its own with a sense of extravagance reserved for something worth celebrating.

AXBRIDGE Chrome

Heritage design tends to look backwards, forgetting much of those periods were spent looking forwards. Invention and industry mattered as much as tradition. New materials brought new methods, conveniences, and perceptions of luxury. Polished chrome was one of them. At the time, it was the future. That's what makes it heritage today.

AXBRIDGE

KITCHEN MIXERS

Brushed Bronze, Brushed Nickel, Brrushed Brass, Chrome & Nickel

The heart of the household is where slow mornings with fresh coffee give way to late suppers, where conversation carries on long after the plates have been cleared. The Axbridge kitchen mixers are made for this life. A crosshead or lever handle turns easily in the hand, and the swivel spout follows the movement from basin to board. Ceramic indices mark hot and cold, finished off with the Booth & Co hallmark. Made for the kitchen, and for all the good things that happen around it.
